WILLIAM GARDNER

education

Columbia University

Doctor of Medicine, expected 2026.

University of Washington

MPH, Global Health Metrics, 2020.

Thesis: Global, Regional, and National Estimates of Complete Coverage of Maternal Obstetric Care Interventions, 1990–2019.

Harvard University

AB, Sociology, Magna cum laude with Highest Honors, 2017.

Thesis: Institutions, Inequalities, and Infant Death: Understanding the Role of Health Care Decommodification in Latin America

Minor: Global Health and Health Policy

experience

Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation

Seattle, WA

Research Scientist

2020 – present

Post-Bachelor Fellow

2017 – 2020

Work on the Neonatal and Child Health and Anemia teams as part of the Global Burden of Disease Study, modeling disease burden due to neonatal infectious diseases, population hemoglobin distributions and prevalence and causes of anemia, disease burden attributable to suboptimal breastfeeding, and coverage of a variety of maternal and child health interventions, including antenatal care, skilled birth attendance, facility births, cesarean section, and postnatal care.

Department of Sociology, Harvard University

Cambridge, MA

Research Assistant

2015 – 2017

Worked under the direction of Professor Jason Beckfield on a project researching the effects of income inequality on population health in Latin America using cross-national economic and health data from the World Income Inequality Database, World Bank, and World Values Survey.

Department of Global Health and Health Policy, Harvard University

Cambridge, MA

Cordeiro Summer Research Fellow

2016

Conducted research for individual project entitled "Evaluating Distributional Effects of the Welfare State on Health in Latin America," which culminated in my senior thesis; Duties included performing extensive literature reviews and cited reference searches, acquiring and cleaning relevant data sources, data modeling and statistical analysis, and manuscript writing.

Child Family Health International

Quito & Chone, Ecuador

Urban and Rural Comparative Health Intern

2014

Observed and participated in clinical rotations in various specialty clinics and hospitals in the towns of Quito and Chone, Ecuador; Researched and reported on topics dealing with health disparities and inequalities between urban and rural healthcare systems; attended weekly lectures on topics in global health and health policy in Ecuador.
